Article on National Education Day: Changing Course, Transforming Education

India commemorates National Education Day every year on 11th November. It's an honour to first education minister after Indian independence - Maulana Abul Kalam Azad. His main focus was educating the rural poor people and girls. His other key areas were vocational training, diversification of secondary education, universal primary education, free and compulsory education for all children up to the age of 14. The theme for this year's National Education Day is "Changing Course, Transforming Education". The need to reform the education system and make it more modern is emphasized in the theme. It is a call for reforming the education system in India to make it more adaptable to the changing times. There is a need to ensure that all educational streams get equal importance.

The need of our education system is critical thinking and holistic, inquiry based, discovery based and analysis based. The National Education Policy 2020, has laid down transformative ideas to reshape it. The education system can be merged with any subject. The idea is to get children what they want and what they are interested in. For experiential and hands on learning, STEM education plays a huge role, which focus on individual students learning styles and interests. Education has evolved rapidly in the last few decades and technology has helped to take education to the remotest parts of the country. Quality education, along with skill development has become an essential part of the overall development of youth.

Proper teacher training ensures teachers to remain up to date over time and it develops the country's education system. We must strengthen in-service programme to meet the needs of teachers. Reflection in teachers must be encouraged and find the forums to do so, which is lacking at present. Teachers must be encouraged to build their capacity to use EdTech.

The current education system must focus on evaluation on the basis of classroom participation by a student along with extracurricular activities. Education must compete with global trends by providing student centric education to meet the emerging trends and to make it more adaptable to the changing scenarios in India.

Every human being should have access to good quality of education irrespective of their social or economic background. Learning is one of the surest paths towards having a successful and flourishing life as it assists one, in understanding life better and gaining knowledge to fulfil one's own ambitions. An educated person holds the ability to perceive issues and give worthy solutions and walk in the direction of transformation.

Education: A powerful weapon to transform nation

“Education is not just a means to earn a living or to acquire wealth. It is an initiation into life, a training-ground for the mind and the soul, a gateway to a wider and more profound understanding of the world.”
- J. Krishnamurti

Education has always been seen as a powerful tool to transform a nation. It is through education that individuals gain knowledge, skills, and values that enable them to contribute positively to society. Education provides the foundation for personal and national development, and it is a crucial factor in building a prosperous and peaceful nation.

Education transforms individuals by providing them with the tools they need to succeed in life. Through education, people learn critical thinking skills, problem-solving skills, communication skills, and other important abilities that are necessary for success in today's global economy. Education also fosters creativity, innovation, and a lifelong love of learning, which are all vital for personal growth and fulfillment.

Moreover, education is the key to addressing many of the pressing issues facing nations today. For example, education can help to eradicate poverty by providing individuals with the skills they need to earn a living and contribute to the economy. It can also promote social justice by providing individuals with the knowledge and tools they need to advocate for their rights and the rights of others.

In addition, education plays a critical role in building a peaceful and prosperous nation. Educated individuals are more likely to be tolerant of others and to embrace diversity. They are also more likely to be engaged in their communities, to participate in civic life, and to support democratic values. A nation with an educated citizenry is one that is more likely to be peaceful, prosperous, and stable.

However, despite the importance of education, there are still many challenges facing nations in terms of providing quality education to all citizens. These challenges include inadequate funding, lack of access to education, and low-quality education. Addressing these challenges will require a concerted effort on the part of governments, educators, and civil society organizations.

Education is a powerful weapon to transform a nation. It provides individuals with the tools they need to succeed in life, helps to address pressing social issues, and builds peaceful and prosperous nations.

As J. Krishnamurti stated, education is not just a means to earn a living or to acquire wealth, it is an initiation into life, a training-ground for the mind and the soul, a gateway to a wider and more profound understanding of the world. Therefore, investing in education is not just an investment in individuals, but an investment in the future of nations.
